EXAMINATIONS BEGIN FRIDAY

Examiners Fear That There Will Be a Lack of Letter Carriers.

The civil service examiners announce that they will begin the examinations on next Friday morning, in the High School building, at 8:30 o'clock. All those who wish to try for positions under the government service, must present themselves for examination at that time and place. It is feared that there will not be a sufficient number of men obtainable for the letter carrying service to put that department on the footing that is hoped. The examiners are in receipt of a telegram from Washington stating it is the intention of the postal department to put ten or more men in this branch of the government work beginning with the first of August. Men are very slow in applying. Most of them seem to think that there are so many other people making applications that there is little or no chance for any one. This is not the case. There is a good opportunity for every bright, intelligent young man.

TRIBUTE TO DOLE.

What a Former Political Enemy Says of the Governor.

The Boston Transcript, the paper represented here in 1893-94 by Julius A.
Palmer, the bitter opponent of annexation, contains the following impartial tribute to Governor Dole touching his relations with the Legislature and to the land question:

The action of Governor Dole of Hawaii in refusing to extend longer the session of the Legislature, while it may appear on its face as arbitrary and imperial, is regarded by those who are conversant with conditions there as only firm and just. The Home Rule party in the Legislature which has superficially a large majority seems to have been able to accomplish nothing and Governor Dole may have adopted this policy to bring its members to their senses. The more one studies the situation at Honolulu the more he is impressed with the belief that our government has been fortunate in being able to command the services of such a pure, able man as Sanford Dole to rule the affairs of this new territory, a problem in which we are for the first time confronted with the administration of native races. The attacks which have emanated from Honolulu and Washington upon his official conduct have invariably turned out to be based on untruthful premises. Undoubtedly of this sort was the charge made by Delegate Wilcox, in a recent Washington interview, that Governor Dole was in favor of making new leases of public lands, to run ninety-nine years, thus giving everything into the hands of the sugar trust, and preventing any subdivisions of these large bodies of public lands.

Governor Dole's past record should be a sufficient answer to the accusations of Delegate Wilcox. If Governor Dole has any special distinction aside from his official position, it is in connection with the Land Act which was introduced into and carried through the Legislature by him several years ago, by which special measures were enacted for the benefit of homesteaders, both native and foreign. In so doing it is well known that he met strong opposition from would-be holders of large estates. Professor Blackman, of Yale University, in his book, "The Making of Hawaii," 1899, says:
"Since 1894 several efforts have been made to repeal the land laws. Ex-President Dole is a strenuous advocate of this policy, and at its first session the Legislature of the republic passed an admirable land act (1895), which provides among other matters for homestead leases, covering from eight to forty-five acres, according to the quality of land, and running for 999 years, without purchase price or rent, and conditioned only on continuous occupation as homes, payment of taxes, and a certain degree of improvement." Governor Dole himself says in an article in Harper's Weekly for February 11, 1899, "The land system of the republic of Hawaii, which encourages the settlement of individuals upon small farms has been very successful." The continuation of this policy under annexation is vital to a successful settlement of the public land by a class which by its industry and its interest in public affairs shall favorably affect the future politics of the country. . . . Speculators are dissatisfied with the Hawaiian land system, which intentionally excludes them from all participation in its benefits, and are looking hopefully to Washington for legislation that shall open the public lands to their manipulation, and are discussing means to promote such legislation."

In regard to the leasing of lands after annexation, these are the facts: Under the "Newlands resolution," and the President's proclamation, the civil judicial and military officials of the Hawaiian republic were to continue to exercise authority until Congress should provide for the government of Hawaii. Immediately succeeding annexation applications were made to the Hawaiian government for the purchase of public lands. The government sent to Washington for an interpretation of the "Newlands resolution" in regard to land transfers, and while waiting for a reply continued to act as heretofore. Interested parties in the Islands represented to the national administration that the lands were being distributed in an unconstitutional manner. Hence Attorney General Griggs' decision in September 1899. Congress, however, approved and confirmed the action of the Hawaiian government in the organic act, which says:

"That all sales, grants, leases and other dispositions of the public domain, and agreements concerning the same, and all franchises granted in good faith by the Hawaiian government in conformity with the laws of Hawaii between the seventh day of July, eighteen hundred and ninety-eight and the twenty-eighth day of September, eighteen hundred and ninety-nine, are hereby ratified and confirmed."

It is further charged that the Governor has no authority to lease or sell public lands, but that he has done so nevertheless. The organic act says:
"No lease of agricultural land shall be granted, sold, or renewed by the government of the Territory of Hawaii for a longer period than five years until Congress shall otherwise direct."
This is certainly some authority.
This seems to dispose thoroughly of these charges, but we may expect to be inundated with a new lot now that Governor Dole has had the firmness and grit to "lay down the law" literally and figuratively to the legislators who have shown their inability to transact the business for which they were called together.
